THIRTY-FOURTH REPORT

OF THE

INSPECTOR

OF

REFORMATORY AND INDUSTRIAL SCHOOLS IN IRELAND.

TO THE

RIGHT HON. GERALD W BALFOUR, P.C., M.P.,

&c., &c.,

CHIEF SECRETARY TO THE LORD LIEUTENANT OF IRELAND.

OFFICE OF INSPECTOR OF REFORMATORY AND INDUSTRIAL SCHOOLS IN IRELAND,

DUBLIN CASTLE,

20th July, 1896.

SIR,

I have the honour to submit the Thirty-fourth Report on Reformatory and Industrial Schools in Ireland, showing their condition and working during the year 1895.

At the end of 1895 there were 6 Reformatories and 70 Industrial Schools in existence in Ireland.

"REFORMATORY SCHOOLS."

The following Table shows the number of Roman Catholics and Protestant Reformatory Schools, respectively:—

	REFORMATORIES.		INDUSTRIAL SCHOOLS.
	Roman Catholics.	Pro- testants.	Roman Catholics.	Pro- testants.

The most noteworthy event as regards Irish Reformatories which took place during the year was the closing of Cork-street Reformatory School. This is the more to be regretted because it was the only Female Protestant School in Ireland. Since it has ceased to exist there have been several cases of young Protestant female offenders who had to be sent to gaol for offences for which in former times they would have been committed to a Reformatory. This action of the judicial authorities, although an unfortunate necessity, is decidedly reactionary in character, seeing that it reverts to the old method of ignoring the possibility of reformation in the case of juvenile offenders. The expense of maintenance of Cork-street was, however, so great, that it became impossible to keep it up. This arose from the small and constantly declining number of committals to it, which may be explained by circumstances connected with its history to which it is not now necessary to allude in detail. As matters stand, I think the Protestants of Ireland should seriously consider the advisability of founding a new female Reformatory School in Belfast, or in some large Protestant centre, where it would be possible to obtain a Committee composed of ladies and gentlemen with sufficient time at their disposal to manage it.

The following Table shows the number of children in Reformatory Schools on the 31st of December, 1894, and on the 31st of December, 1895.

Abolition of Imprisonment.

The change in the law under which imprisonment is no longer an obligatory portion of a Reformatory sentence has already produced important results. About one half of those committed to Reformatories in 1895 were not sent to gaol. I hope as time goes on the number of young offenders sent to prison will rapidly diminish, and ultimately cease altogether. While I am on this subject I wish again to point out to magistrates and judicial authorities generally that under the altered circumstances of the law it is desirable that they should weigh the disadvantage of not committing to Reformatories young offenders when first convicted of serious offences, and to consider carefully whether it would not be well to send children who give evidence of criminal proclivities to a Reformatory at an early age. It should be remembered that inmates of Reformatory Schools must now be discharged at the age of 19, and if they are sent to school, say at the age of 15 or 16, undisciplined, demoralized, and ries at an unlettered, it is hardly fair to expect that, during the short time they are under detention, any great abiding influence can be made upon their character. The object of the whole Reformatory system is not to suppress crime by severe measures, but to prevent it by reforming offenders before they become habitual criminals, therefore it is obvious that they should be brought under its action as early in their career of crime as possible.

I regret to note that some persons without reflection occasionally question the utility of Reformatory Schools. The idea of punishment being accompanied by attempt at reformation has been sneered at by those whose circumstances gave them an easy life in this world, and removed them from the peculiar temptations of the poor, ever since it was first formulated in 1702 by Mabillon, the famous Benedictine of the Congrégation de St. Maur. That distinguished person, one of the most learned men of his day and generation, thinking of the opposition which his idea would encounter from formalists and commonplace administrators of his own time, wrote as follows :—

*Criticism on Reformatory
Schools.*

"Je ne doute pas que tout ceci ne passe pour une idée d'un monde nouveau : mais quoi qu'on en dise ou qu'on en pense il sera facile lorsqu'on voudra de rendre ces prisons plus utiles et plus supportables."*

Since then the idea has been developed by various eminent writers in France, Germany, and Italy. It has been practically applied by statesmen of various countries, and has been carried into the public throng of men, so as to completely alter the methods of dealing with crime. How the working of this idea in Ireland, in the case of Reformatory Schools, has diminished juvenile crime may be judged by the two following Tables.

This shows that the number of children committed for crime between 1870 and 1890 diminished by nearly 55 per cent.; and those twenty years seem to me to give a fair idea of the service done by these Schools for the suppression of juvenile crime.

The following Table gives the number of children in Reformatory Schools for the last fifteen years:—

—	Boys.	Girls.	Total.
1875,	908	212	1,100
1881,	906	213	1,119
1882,	955	184	1,140

1893,	555	83	638
1894,	528	76	604
1895,	507	63	570

During these fifteen years four Reformatory Schools were closed. It will be perceived that there was a persistent decrease of juvenile convictions from year to year, and that the numbers have fallen from 1,160 in 1880, to 589 in 1895, which represents a fall of just 50 per cent.

Decrease of Juvenile Offenders.

This state of things would seem to compare favourably with that of England. In a most interesting article in the Times of May 30th on the judicial statistics recently published by the Home Office, attention is called to the increase in the proportion of juvenile offenders in England, and it is pointed out how it is a matter for uneasy reflection that, in days when school boards abound, youthful criminals should be rapidly increasing. During 1893 and 1894 one-fourth of the persons convicted of simple larceny were children under sixteen—one-third of the convicted burglars were youths between sixteen and twenty-one; and in 1893 over twenty-six per cent. of the crimes against morals were committed by persons under twenty-one. The diminution of juvenile crime in Ireland, which contrasts so favourably with its increase in England, is, no doubt, due to a great extent to the working of the Irish Reformatories. It cannot be accounted for by the decrease in the population. The Reformatories broke up the organized gangs of young criminals which used to infest our great cities and towns; and it is worth while noting that in places where the Reformatory Acts are not used with vigour, marked indications can be observed of the revival of such gangs, and the increase of the number of children who have become habitual criminals.

Of course in considering the causes of the decrease of juvenile crime the working of the Industrial Schools Act has to be taken into account. The Industrial Schools were founded for the purpose of rescuing children likely to commit crime, and they have done their work most efficiently.

Glencree Reformatory for Catholic Boys has been admirably managed during the year by Father Cox. Some useful alterations have been made. The health of the inmates was good. Thirty-one boys were placed out on licence by the Manager in 1895, and all, except two, were doing well at the end of the year.

Glencree
Reformatory.

As regards St. Conleth's, Philipstown, 71 boys were sent to this Reformatory during the year. This was an increase on the average for the last few years, and was no doubt due to the fact that Magistrates are able to commit without a term of imprisonment. The good effect of this change is already evident in the higher tone it has given to the inmates of these Reformatories. They can now look forward to a future free from the reproach of having been once in prison. In illustration of this, I may mention that a boy, at whose trial for a very atrocious offence I was myself present, and who was sent direct to Philipstown some twelve months ago by the Chief Baron, has been so influenced by the chance which has been given him of becoming a respectable member of society, that, although at the time of his committal he was almost illiterate and seemingly without any moral sense, he has succeeded in working his way into the fourth class in school during the year, and is a most promising apprentice at his trade of blacksmith.

Health of Phillipstown.

The health of the inmates was excellent, and is no doubt partly due to the cleanliness insisted on in every department, to the food which is wholesome, and perhaps still more to the admirable hospital accommodation. During the year considerable improvements have been made in the dormitories, laundry, and kitchen, but the most important work of all was the erection of a gymnasium in one of the playgrounds, which was constructed by the boys themselves under the supervision of the foreman, and reflects the greatest credit on all concerned. The shed is one hundred feet long, twenty-five feet wide, and twenty-four feet high, and it has already been a source of incalculable benefit in cold and rainy weather.

Malone
Reformatory
for Boys.

Malone is the only Protestant Reformatory now in Ireland, and it is situated a short distance from Belfast. Great changes have recently taken place as regards the juvenile population of that city since the first Annual Report of this Reformatory in the year 1861. At that time most of the boys committed were hardened criminals, and one inmate of the Reformatory in the year 1861 had been no less than seventeen times in gaol. At present the boys have been for the most part rescued before they could commit any grievous crime, and hence they are much more easy to dispose of when their time of detention expires. There were 15 boys received into this Institution during the year, of these 7 came from Belfast. The conduct of the boys has been good. A system by which they can earn good marks works well; and they look forward to the rewards which they can obtain on their discharge. The sanitary condition of the institution is satisfactory, and no serious illness occurred in it during the year. The education of the school is very good, and I quite agree with the report of Mr. Gordon, ex-Inspector of National Schools, who made a special examination of the boys last December, where he says that the fourth and fifth classes, which are the highest in the institution, and which include reading, writing, spelling, arithmetic, geography, and grammar, would do credit to a well-taught National school.

High Park,
Limerick,
Spark's Lake
Reformatory.

There are three Female Roman Catholic Reformatories:—Highfield, Drumcondra, St. Joseph's, Limerick, and Spark's Lake, Monaghan. They have all a good record.

In summing up the work of these Reformatories, I have to state that out of 559 inmates discharged during the three years previous to 1895, 483 are doing well, 8 have died, and 58 have turned out unsatisfactorily, showing that over 80 per cent. of these offenders have been rescued from a criminal life.

"INDUSTRIAL SCHOOLS."

Considerable misconception seems to prevail as to the objects of these institutions. This confusion of thought arises to some extent from the name they bear. Many appear to think that their work should mainly consist in promoting technical education, and perhaps to some extent providing homes for children of respectable parents whose means may be exceptionally straitened. In reality these schools were created with a view to lighten the work of the Reformatories by rescuing children before they actually fell into crime. The public should therefore remember that they are mainly institutions for the formation of character and for the prevention of crime, and not primarily for promoting technical education. There are seventy of these schools in Ireland.

	Males.	Females.	Total.

The next gives the number of Children under Detention on 31st Dec., 1894, and 31st Dec., 1895:—

Total,	3,703	4,899	8,553	3,631	4,842	8,523

There are sixteen Roman Catholic Male Schools, 10 are for senior and 6 for junior boys. Of the former, 6 are managed by the Christian Brothers, namely, Artane, Carriglea, Limerick, Galway, Tralee, and Letterfrack.

SENIOR ROMAN CATHOLIC BOYS' SCHOOLS.

Artane is the largest school in Ireland, and has been noticed by me at such length in former Reports that it seems hardly necessary to describe its general work at any great length during the year. There were 163 boys discharged, and they were disposed of as follows:—129 went to various employments and trades, such as carpenters, shoemakers, tailors, and the like; 24 returned to their families or friends, 1 boy emigrated, 2 were specially discharged, 1 was committed to a Reformatory, and 6 were discharged on account of informality in the committal order. The health of the boys was good. There was no death in the institution, nor no case of typhoid fever, diphtheria, or any disease usually produced by unsanitary conditions. There was a slight epidemic of scarlatina in the early part of the year, which was, however, promptly and effectually stamped out.

Carriglea. Carriglea has not been working long enough, and, on account of the paucity of numbers, it has not up to now been able to show any striking results.

Letterfrack. The school at Letterfrack, in the county of Galway, is admirably situated as far as health is concerned, and I hope will render service to the west of Ireland in the future.

Salt Hill, Limerick. The schools in Galway and Limerick are flourishing.

Tralee. Since I have been in my present office, however, I hardly think that, all things considered, any school managed by the Christian Brothers has changed so much for the better as the one at Tralee.

Milltown, Belfast. The school at Milltown, Belfast, which is not managed by a religious order, has advantages which should enable it to carry out with exceptional ease the intentions of those who framed and carried the Irish Industrial Schools Act.

Clonmel and Upton. The two schools at Clonmel and Upton, under the direction of the Rosminian Fathers, continue to be managed most efficiently. There are few schools in the kingdom that could show a more satisfactory record as far as disposal goes than Clonmel. The excellent administration of Father Harrington has made itself felt in several departments, and both he and his reverend colleague, Father Fennell, the Manager at Upton, have succeeded in making their schools to some extent model institutions. At Upton the boys are admirably taught. Both these establishments would make suitable agricultural schools, if ever it should be decided to establish educational centres in this country where lads might acquire practical skill in agriculture, in the use of implements and agricultural machines, and receive scientific instruction in what must remain for a long time the main industry of Ireland. I am quite confident that the Rosminian Fathers would be most willing to meet any reasonable proposal which might be made with a view to alter the character both of Upton and Clonmel, and transform them into institutions like the "Ackerbau Schulen" in Germany, which are scattered so numerously in the various states of that empire, or like La Pilletière in Sarthe, an institution which has done great service to agriculture in France, and to which there is not a larger quantity of land attached than that at the disposal of the Fathers at Upton and Clonmel. This scheme could, however, only be carried out after legislation for promoting agricultural education in Ireland on the lines suggested by the late Dr. W. K. Sullivan to the Royal Commission on Technical Education, and to which I alluded at some length in my former reports.

JUNIOR BOYS' SCHOOLS.

There are six schools for junior boys managed by Nuns. These are:—Passage West, Killarney, Drogheda, Cappoquin, Rathdrum, and Kilkenny. Boys from these institutions are usually transferred when they reach the age of 9. They are, generally speaking, well taught and fairly forward in their books. The managers, however, should bear constantly in mind the absolute necessity for unceasing vigilance in matters of personal hygiene and cleanliness. They should also be most careful to watch all cases of eye disease, and to take counsel with their Medical Officer on all such cases. This is a matter of primary importance to these schools, and I very earnestly invite the Managers to take my advice most seriously to heart.

ROMAN CATHOLIC FEMALE INDUSTRIAL SCHOOLS.

There are forty-two of these schools in Ireland. They are all under the control of Nuns of various Religious Orders. Many of them are well managed, and I feel confident that in all of them the inmates are treated with kindness, and their future welfare considered. In all of them but two, the teaching was most satisfactory, and this is shown by the reports of the National School Inspectors. As regards the two in which I think the teaching was not quite up to the mark, I am glad to say that efforts have been made to remedy deficiencies. With reference to practical teaching I must, however, say, in my opinion, that in many of these institutions there is great room for improvement. I would urge Managers to make more serious efforts to have the girls taught cooking, and made to understand thoroughly proper laundry work. All these girls on leaving ought to know how to wash, and all who show any aptitude for it should be instructed in cooking. Most of them should also be taught how to handle and fold linen, how to polish grates, fire-irons, &c., how to lay a table and how to wait. It is by knowledge of these things that they will be able, with certainty, to procure immediate employment when their period of detention terminates; while girls who leave after having passed successful examinations in the usual books of the National Board, and who may have other special accomplishments, may be totally unable to procure permanent remunerative employment.

The Sligo School merits special praise both as regards its teaching, its general work, and the help it gives through the House of Mercy to girls after their discharge.

The lace making at Kinsale and the weaving industry at Queenstown are still being carried on, and the Poultry Farms at Newtownforbes and Sligo are flourishing. The Convents of the Good Shepherd in Cork and Limerick have been excellently conducted, and the good record of girls who have left and who are getting on well in the world is maintained.

During the year a new school was opened at Carysfort, Blackrock, for eighty girls, by which amount the Certificate at Bootertown was reduced, and that number of children was transferred from the latter school to Carysfort. This school is as yet too new to enable me to say anything as to its success in the ultimate disposal of its inmates, which is the supreme test of the success of an Industrial School. I have every confidence that it will be successful, but I shall expect that the manager will be able always to give precise information as to how girls who have left are getting on, and what calling they are actually engaged in.

MALE PROTESTANT INDUSTRIAL SCHOOLS.

There are four Industrial Schools for Protestant boys in Ireland—Fox Lodge and the Grampian Training Ship in Belfast Lough, Marble Hill near Cork, and the Meath at Blackrock, Co. of Dublin.

Fox Lodge. Fox Lodge has done another year of good work. The health of the boys was most satisfactory, and their education well attended to. A new and better site to which the Committee propose ultimately to transfer the school has been secured. This will involve other changes which must increase its usefulness.

Grampian. In my former reports I called attention to the circumstance that very few boys discharged from the Grampian took to a sailor's life. In 1892, 50 boys were discharged, of whom 7 only joined the Merchant Service and not one entered the Navy. In 1893, 9 out of 54 who were discharged went to sea. In 1894, 60 were discharged; of these 6 went to sea and not one joined the Royal Navy. Last year there was a better record. Eighty boys were discharged; of these 10 entered the Merchant Service and 5 the Royal Navy. Nevertheless, I adhere to my previously expressed opinion that, considering the expense of managing both the Fox Lodge and the Grampian as separate Institutions, they should be amalgamated, the attempt to prepare lads for the sea on a stationary ship abandoned, and the boys in both Fox Lodge and the Grampian trained in a suitable house on shore. With their newly-acquired property the committee which manages both these institutions will, I hope, see their way to carry out this suggestion.

Marble Hill. Marble Hill Industrial School, Cork, is managed by a very representative committee, and the corresponding manager, Mr. Edwin Hall, has spared no effort to make the institution a success. It is, however, steadily going down in point of numbers, and notwithstanding the zeal of those connected with its management, and the interest taken in it by many of the most respectable citizens in Cork, I confess I cannot help looking forward with apprehension to its future.

The Meath Industrial School prospered during the year, and continues to be one of the best in Ireland. The gymnasium, about which I spoke in my last report, and which was erected mainly through the energies of Dr. Gordon, has proved a great success. Each class is drilled and exercised in it separately every day, and then the whole school collectively. The Gordon Home—to which I have previously called attention, and in which boys who have left the school and are engaged in business in the city of Dublin can live—is becoming daily a more apparent want in connection with such a school as this. It is of the most absolute necessity, however, that the charitable Protestant population of Dublin should come forward heartily to support this institution where lads can be looked after when they are just starting in life, where reasonable discipline prevails, where they will enjoy freedom of action as far as possible, and be provided with such comfortable surroundings as will deprive them of the temptation to seek consolation for discomfort in disreputable places and disreputable company. I cannot conclude this notice of the Meath School without expressing my sincere regret that death has deprived it of the services of my friend, Mr. Justice Harrison, who was Treasurer, and one of the Trustees of the school. Few of those connected with it took a more active or energetic part in its working as long as his health permitted.

FEMALE PROTESTANT INDUSTRIAL SCHOOLS.

There were six Protestant schools for girls at the close of the year. Two of them were in Cork under the management of Miss Woodroffe. These have recently been amalgamated, and I hope serious defects, which I had to complain of when they existed separately, will now be remedied.

Cork
Schools.

The Protestant Industrial School, Heytesbury-street, calls for the very serious attention of those connected with its management. At one time there seemed a likelihood of this school being amalgamated with the Meath Female School situated at Bray. I regret that this plan was not carried out.

Heytesbury-street
School.

The school at Bray is most excellently situated, and it continues under the management of Lady Kathleen Brabazon, who has shown no abatement in her interest in it.

Meath, Bray.

There are two schools for Protestant female children in Belfast—Shamrock Lodge and Hampton House. The former institution continues to be managed by Mrs. Byers. This circumstance alone is in itself, for all acquainted with the Irish education of women, a sufficient guarantee for the efficient management of the institution. The training is good and practical, and the general education is quite up to the mark of an average school. Above all, the greatest care is taken in the placing out of the children, and they are watched with exceptional vigilance for some time after their discharge. The result is that many of them have turned out extremely well, and some of those whose prospects seemed the most gloomy are now fortunate and prosperous in life.

Shamrock
Lodge

Hampton
House.

Hampton House continues to be very satisfactory. Most of the children are from the city of Belfast; and the majority of them come from homes of want and penury, where parents who have been worsted in the struggle for life, drag out a miserable and often times a disreputable existence. The health of the girls has been very good, and the school was free from any serious disease. The personal cleanliness of the children is most carefully attended to. The dietary is satisfactory in almost every particular. The household and laundry work deserves special commendation.

My recommendations that new committals should not be permitted to enter the school till examined by the Doctor have been rigidly carried out with very beneficial results.

Two cottages, on the model of Princess Mary's Homes, have been for some time attached to this institution. By the end of this year three more will be added to them.

This school and Shamrock Lodge are, I am sorry to say, the only Industrial Schools in Ireland where these Homes exist.

FINANCIAL STATEMENT—REFORMATORY SCHOOLS.

The gross total received from all sources for the support of the Reformatories during the past year amounted to £14,375 ls. 2½*d.* The following table shows the receipts for the last two years:—

INDUSTRIAL SCHOOLS.

The total amount received on behalf of these Schools during the past year was £153,041 7s. 5½d., which was a decrease of £1,391 9s. 7d., as compared with 1894. The accompanying table gives the various sums received during the two years ending 31st December, 1894, and 31st December, 1895:—

—	1894.	1895.	Increase.	Decrease.
	£ s. d.	£ s. d.	£ s. d.	£ s. d.

Total, . .	154,422 17 0½	153,041 7 5½	684 17 8½	2,076 7 2½

The difference is owing to decrease from miscellaneous sources, which amounts to £1,168 9s. 10d. I wish to point out that there is an increase of £684 17s. 8½d. from estimated profits.

The total outlay for last year amounted to £165,812 8s. 3½d.

I herewith publish the items of expenditure for the two last years:—

The average cost per head for children in Industrial Schools for last year came to £18 10s. 7d.

PARENTAL CONTRIBUTION.

The sum of £803 8s. 8d. was collected last year for children in Reformatory and Industrial Schools, as shown herewith:—

—	Reformatories.	Industrial Schools.	Total.
	£ s. d.	£ s. d.	£ s. d.
Dublin,	182 4 6	136 8 3	318 12 9

Total,	301 5 6	507 3 2	808 8 8

As has been explained in former reports the decrease in Parental Money is owing partly to the steady falling off of committals to Reformatories, and to the fact that there seems an indisposition on the part of Magistrates to make orders against parents. The great contribution of Parental Money, in proportion to the population, has always been contributed by Dublin. During the last year there seems to have been great want of employment in the city and neighbourhood, which has made the Magistrates hesitate to make orders; as an instance in point, I may say that, in one district, out of 254 cases in which this office applied for a Parental Order, orders were made in only 17 of them. In the case of Reformatory Schools, moreover, failure to comply with the award of the Magistrates may result in imprisonment. It is not so in the case of Industrial Schools, and it is quite certain that the majority of parents are perfectly well aware that there is no means of practically enforcing these orders. The result is, they are often treated with contempt. The remedy of distress to which the Government may resort to secure obedience to the order is quite illusory, because in nine cases out of ten there are no effects to be distrained.

BALTIMORE FISHING SCHOOL.

Baltimore School differs from all the other Industrial Schools in Ireland in that it was founded for a special purpose—namely, to teach boys every art connected with Fishing, and the peculiar technical training required for it. It continues to be steadily watched over by the Governors, who are indefatigable in their exertions to make it an Institution of National importance, and who have struggled against great difficulties with exceptional resolution. The record of their attendance at meetings of the Board during the year, often, to my personal knowledge, at considerable inconvenience, merits exceptional praise. Fourteen meetings were held during the year. At these two of the Governors attended every meeting, another was only absent on one occasion, one attended 11 times, and two attended nine meetings. They have expended a large sum of money during the past year in carrying out extensive alterations and improvements in the buildings, which were most essential, and many of them absolutely required, to meet the exigencies of the school, and extend its usefulness.

In previous reports I entered so fully into the importance to the country of this Institution, as originally intended by its Founders, that I can do little more on the present occasion than refer again to them. Close attention to the details of its working during the past year confirms the opinions I have formerly expressed.

The accounts, which are always open for inspection, are kept in a most careful and elaborate manner, and it should always be remembered that Baltimore is the only Industrial School in the country which has its accounts audited by a Government auditor.

From the last audited account, I find the following was the net expenditure, after credits to each account, during the year ending 31st December, 1895:—

EXPENDITURE FOR 1895.

	£	s.	d.
Salaries,	301	3	4
Provisions,	1,152	0	9½
Clothing,	428	3	1
Washing, Fuel, and Light,	127	9	2½

Carpentering—Teaching, &c.,	118	4	2½
Fishing Vessels, Nets, &c.,	9	1	4½
Repayments of Loans, Interest, &c.,	57	2	0

I regret to state that the Contributions to the school during last year were very small indeed, having amounted to only £75 1s. 3d., and that the Governors had been obliged to undertake the responsibility of an overdraft on their bankers to nearly £1,500. I have also learned that in consequence of the alterations and additions to the buildings this debt has since been increased. The expenditure on Buildings during the past year, including the new Infirmary, cost £1,074, making a total expenditure on Buildings alone, since the foundation of the School, of nearly £9,000.

In my last report I said that "the idea of establishing a school of this kind was a happy one, and notwithstanding many difficulties it could be made a useful National Institution." I hold this view as strongly as I did last year, and think it is deserving of and should command substantial public support.

In that Report I commented also on the improvements made in cooking—the dietary given to the boys—and the daily records kept. These are at all times left open for inspection, so that any friends of the pupils, or any person interested, can ascertain at once what the boys had for breakfast, dinner, or supper on any day throughout the year, and what the meal cost. These arrangements are still maintained, and, if adopted in other schools, would be of incalculable benefit. So important do I look upon them, that I have directed again a week's dietary, taken at random, to be published in this Report, together with the form of book adopted for recording each day's dietary, not only of the boys but of all officers and servants, as a guide for Managers. This information will be found in the Appendices, pages 85 to 88.

I also referred to the difficulties which had to be encountered in founding a school of this description—to the insufficiency (owing to want of funds) of the number of fishing vessels at present attached to the school—to the importance of having an increased number of fishing craft of such a class, as to enable boys over 1½ years of age to go to sea during all fishing seasons—to the great expense necessarily attendant on the peculiar technical training required, and the fitting out of first-class vessels—to the necessity for certain alterations in the law with respect to schools of this character. I insisted at the same time on the advantage which might be derived from it by the sea-coast population, if the intention of its founders be carried out in its entirety, and directed attention to various other matters to which I must now only refer. An Infirmary has been recently built. The health of the boys has been good. And there has been a great improvement in their general education, which I hope will be maintained.

One hundred and eleven boys were discharged from the school, on attaining 16 years of age, since its opening up to the end of 1895. Of these 5 joined the Navy, 23 took to seafaring and fishing, and 1 to net-making, so that about 26 per cent. have taken to callings connected with the sea.

GENERAL REMARKS.

OPHTHALMIA.

I am glad to state that ophthalmia is by no means so prevalent as it was when I came into office, and in schools where it was formerly virulent, it has been completely got rid of. It does, however, unfortunately exist in some of the schools, and its presence must be attributed to defective administration on the part of school authorities. They have been told over and over again that ophthalmia, if neglected, may lead to the total destruction of the eye, and that both acute and chronic ophthalmia are highly contagious. Infection occurs mainly through transference from the secretion of the eye of the affected person. Managers of schools should, therefore, when they observe a child suffering from any affection of the eye at once call in medical aid, and if the sufferer is afflicted with a form of the disease dangerous to others, the patient should be rigidly isolated, as if suffering from scarlet-fever in its most contagious stage. This practice is carried out in several of the schools, and where it has been persevered in for some time ophthalmia never became chronic; and, indeed, I know institutions which have been for a long time perfectly free from it.

CORPORAL PUNISHMENT.

I am glad to be able to state that corporal punishment is steadily diminishing, and the punishment books are better kept than formerly. I notice, too, that the decrease is most marked in the schools which are best managed. I should be glad to see it, if possible, abolished altogether. I do not think that a cane should ever be used; it is always more or less dangerous to the class of children who are sent to Industrial Schools. The wale suppurating when the vital energies are below par, as they often are in the case of these children, may cause the gravest mischief. I must draw the attention of Managers seriously to this matter, and they must understand that they will be held responsible for any excessive punishment inflicted by any master or official under them.

DIARY BOOKS.

The rules require that a diary should be kept—this has been hitherto, in many schools, very inefficiently done. I trust that I shall not have to find fault in future with carelessness in this respect.

BUILDINGS.

Ever since I have been in office the improvement of the buildings has gone steadily forward. Many of the schools have been completely transformed. During the past year there has been a further marked change for the better, and £10,208 7s. 9d. has been expended upon them. I think it only right to say that all the Managers without any exception have shown themselves most ready and anxious to carry out any structural alteration suggested by me, when their financial resources made it in any way possible.

CONCLUSION.

In concluding this report, I have again to express my deep sense of the good work which these schools are doing. This would be more appreciated, and would also be still much more efficient if the local authorities would take a more active interest in them. While on this point, I should like to suggest that where the local authorities find a contribution for Industrial Schools exceptionally heavy, they should imitate the action of the Corporation of the City of Dublin, and rather limit the number of children for whom they would subscribe than diminish the capitation grant. If these schools are to carry out the work for which they were founded, the children under detention should be properly cared for. It must be remembered that most of them have had their constitutions impaired by bad food and exposure to hardship, and therefore they require to be well clothed and regularly medically inspected. Above all they should be given generous diet to develop their physical system and, incidentally, their mental capacities. It would be much better to close the schools altogether rather than allow them to exist with an inferior scale of dietary, which must result from a diminution of the capitation grant.

I congratulate the Managers generally on the work done during the past year, especially in the care they have taken in the disposal of the children; and express my gratitude personally for the great assistance which many of them have given me in dealing with difficult questions which have from time to time arisen.

I have the honour to be,

Sir,

Your obedient servant,

ROWLAND BLENNERHASSETT, BART., D.L.
